CINCINNATI, SATURDAY, APRIL 39.

TWILIGHT Longfellow thus describes the gradual goming on of the shadows of twilight :

shadows of twilight:
Stowly, slowly up the wall,
Steals the sunshine, steals the shade,
Evening damps begin to fall,
Evening damps begin to fall,
Evening shadows are displayed, Round me, o'er me every—when
The sky is grand with clouds,
And altiwart the evening air
Wheel the swallows home in crowds.
Shafts of sunshine from the west
Paint the dusty windows red,
Darker shades deeper rest,
Underneath and overhead;
Darker, darker, and more wan
In my breast the shadows fall;
Upward steals the life of man,
As the sunshine from the wall,
From the wall into the sky,
From the toof along the spire.
Ah, the sonis of those who die
Are but sunbeams lifted higher.

GLBANINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES. LOUISVILLE. - The Courier of yesterday has the following:

HIGH WATER-HEAVY RISE.—The river during the twenty-four hours ending with last evening had risen fully five feet at the head of the Falls, which was an average of two and a half inches per hour. This is a heavy rise at the present high stage of the river, making nineteen feet water on the Falls and forty-five feet in the channel below the Falls. The weather continues quite cool, and we had no rain yesterday, for a wonder, with the hope that it will be dry to-day.

for a wonder, with the hope that it will be dry today.

The water has risen to within eighteen inches of the flooring on the Third street bridge, with a prospect that it will be on the bridge to-day. The houses along the lower wharf are threatened, but we think the hight of the freshet will be attained to-day, with no lears of an overflow. The weight of the rise yesterday was evidently from the Kontucky Ritver, which was very much swollen, and we learn by a traveler, who arrived from Frankfort yesterday on the cars,
that the Kentucky Ritver at Cogar's Landing the night previous had rison seven feet. That is a point some distance above Frankfort.

From the officers of the Pactfic, from New Orleans, the last arrival, we learn that the flood in the Lower Mississippi had somewhat absted, though it was still rising a little at New Orleans and along the coast.
Along up to Napoleon the river was at a stand, and from that point to Cairo it was falling slowly.

Mudder on a Boar.—We learn from our New Orleans exchanges, that a murder was committed on a stern-wheel boat called the Telegram, on Red River. Thursday week. The steward Wesley Harris, a free negro, killed a white man, a waiter of the name of John. The passengers of the boat arrested Harris. The following was the report of the Coroner:

"The testimony fixed the humicide upon Harris, and showed the unconcern of Capt. Dension in the matter. The post mortem clearly assigned death to the blows on the head. The Coroner's jury gave for their verdict, that the deceased, who was a white man about twenty-five years old, his nationality unknown, and his only known name John, came to his death by the said blows on his head, inflicted by the said Wesley Harris, f. m. c., with Capt. Dension as an accessory after the fact."

The Coroner at once had the Captain arrested; but he was soon relessed, under bail of $1,500.

Our New Orleans exchanges report a rise in Upper Red River. The Hope and Ham Howell were above the shoals. The latter packet has seven hundred balos as her cargo, at $7 a baio.

The Vicksburg Whig, of Saturday, says the river was rising at the rate of one inch and a quarter in twenty-four hours, at that point. It was sixteen inches above the high water mark of 1856, and nine-teen inches above the water intow, sunk all of thom the next night (Wednesday) by running into the timber norn Rock Haven. She took a sudden sheer and struck the left hand shore before her beadway could be checked, sinking all the boats in a few minutes.

The tow-boat was also badly demaged, the cap of the damage to the boat. The footal loss, including the damage of the boat was also badly demaged, the cap of the damage to the boat, lives and coal, was about $7,000.
